STORY

Over the past 13+ years, many sacrifices were made to keep Mason behind the wheel doing what many believe he was born to do, be a race car driver. That's 13 years of back-breaking hard work and hustle just to keep him in the seat. Traveling from Michigan to Florida and everywhere in between, there have been many triumphs and tribulations; the highest of highs and lowest of lows. Numerous holidays, birthdays, and anniversaries have been spent traveling to and from races. The stories that can be told, both happy and sad, are endless. In 2018, every 2 weeks brought a 12-hour trip on Friday from Michigan to North Carolina and back on Sunday so Mason could compete at Hickory Motor Speedway as a little-known driver trying to make his skills known to those that mattered.

In January of 2020, the family home Mason was raised in, was sold in Michigan, the only state he had ever called home. After that, the family's old motorhome made the trip to North Carolina one last time, carrying with it all the possessions it could hold and hearts full of racing dreams. Shortly after, any plans that were made for a new home were thrown out the window as the pandemic shut down the world. Two years of not having a permanent home, having to attend his final 2 years of high school online, leaving all his friends and most of his family behind in Michigan, and figuring out how to wade through life during COVID would probably make anyone question the choices they've made and bring a ton of regret. Not Mason. To this day he's still continuing to work on his racing dreams and wouldn't change any of it. Well, maybe he'd change it a little... but only to get behind the wheel more often!
